Biographical / Historical

---

Katharine Ludington was born in New York City, on October 16, 1869, the daughter of Charles Henry Ludington and Josephine Noyes Ludington. She was the fifth of seven children. In 1918, Ludington became the president of the Connecticut Women's Suffrage League. After the suffrage amendment was ratified in 1920, she took a leadership role in establishing the League of Women's Voters in 1921, serving on the national board and as the New England director. Ludington devoted her life for social justice and world peace and advocated for the creation of United Nations. She also was a successful portrait painter. She never married and died at the age of 83 on March 9, 1953 in Old Lyme, CT.
